

INFORMATION ON COOKIES

The website www.zwiedzaniegorzelni.pl uses cookies. These are IT data (among other things, text files) stored on your terminal equipment end devices (e.g. your computer or telephone) in order to improve the use of our websites. Cookies may be used in order to:

- adapting the content of the website to your preferences,
- optimising the use of the website,
- producing anonymous statistics which enable us to understand how your use of our websites.

The following types of files are used:

- session,
- permanent.

Session files are stored temporarily, i.e. they remain in the memory of your device until you until you log out, close the website or close your browser. However, permanent files remain in the memory of your device for the time specified in the parameters of the file parameters of the cookie or until the file is deleted.

We do not in any way intend to identify or establish your identity through the data collected in the cookies. The cookies used on our website will not be shared with other entities that cooperate with us, in particular advertisers.

By default, web browsers allow the placement of cookies on your terminal equipment. You can change these settings yourself. Detailed information on the possibility and use of cookies are available in your browser settings. Please note that restricting the use of cookies may affect some of the functions available on our website.